

Ninh Binh

Ninh Binh is a city about 2 hours south of Hanoi. The city is not much to write about but the countryside around is breathtakingly gorgeous. Rice fields surround limestone karsts peaks as rivers meander in between and actually through the peaks. The touristy thing to do is take a row boat that goes through three of these tunnel caves and along the rice patties. It was nice, but what I enjoyed more was wondering through the area on a motorbike. Just picking random roads and seeing where they go. It made for a very enjoyable and scenic day. And you can't get lost if you're not going any where to begin with. I was going where ever I ended up.

Views of rice fields and peaks near Ninh Binh.

Emerging from a cave by boat near Ninh Binh.

Workers in the rice fields
near Ninh Binh.

View of rice fields and peaks near Ninh Binh.

Harvesting and separating the rice on a back road near Ninh Binh.

More rice fields and peaks
near Ninh Binh.